Magdalene College (University of Cambridge, UK)

The College of St Mary Magdalene, or more simply Magdalene College, is located in the centre of Cambridge on the River Cam. It was founded in 1428 when King Henry VI approved the establishment of a Benedictine hostel on the site for the monks to study Canon Law at the University. The college was refounded and renamed after the Saint Mary Magdalene in 1542.

Today, the College has some 320 undergraduates, nearly 180 graduate students and around 60 Fellows and other teaching officers. A highlight of the opening of the new millennium was the admission of Nelson Mandela as an Honorary Fellow and his visit to the College in 2001, when he was welcomed by the fellows and students and met some of the holders of the College's Mandela-Magdalene scholarships.

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS & MANAGEMENT

At CSI, you'll learn more about the nature and the scope within management of multinational companies. Through studies of our increasingly globalized world and the challenges that accompany it, delegates will increase their cultural sensitivity and develop the skills necessary to effectively manage cultural differences within a single international business. The following courses are especially designed to educate our delegates who are interested in supporting the international strategy of an organisation in the future. Changes to course descriptions, topics, programme structure, and schedules may occur due to the availability of faculty members at the actual time of the programme.

Entrepreneurship – Evaluation, Creation, and Funding of New Ventures

Delegates will have the opportunity to look at both the failures and successes of companies in order to understand which skills and tools are necessary to evaluate, Create and guide your own business, or to support an employer in launching and growing an entrepreneurial venture.

Business Strategy & Development – Innovation, Organisation, and Markets

We look at the interplay between individuals, organisations and markets, and how innovation can change the nature of competition by destroying industries and creating new ones. Delegates will also be introduced to business model development and will analyse new business proposals. Case studies may include Silicon Valley and other successful and innovative companies.

Banking and Finance

The primary aim of this course is for delegates to develop analytical tools necessary for understanding banking issues and various financial instruments. The properties of these financial instruments will be analysed and related to risk management, portfolio diversification, systemic risk, financial fragility and contagion.

Organisation of Multinational Corporations and Leadership

This course is designed to equip students with the skills to manage global projects and interact with diverse workforces. As the world is becoming increasingly globalised, it is becoming more and more important to recognise cultural differences and adapt business and managerial strategies accordingly.

Chinese Economics and Outbound Investment

This course will give an overview of the various pathways to begin doing business in China. It will also present the success stories of Chinese entrepreneurs, and will analyse the successes and failures of international businesses in China.

Game Theory

In this course, the basic concepts in game theory are covered: utility functions; simultaneous games including Nash equilibrium in pure and mixed strategies; dominant strategies, stability of equilibrium and non-simultaneous games like Stackelberg equilibrium; subgame perfect equilibrium; and supporting cooperation and collusion.

Business Model Development

This course will introduce delegates to a simple, robust model for developing and analysing new business proposals whether as part of entrepreneurial ventures or new lines of business within existing firms.

International Trade

This course explores the interaction between national economies through the flow of imports and exports, multinational firms, and the role and position of the WTO in the global economy. This course emphasizes the theoretical models of international trade, global production structures and associated policies.

Human Resource Management

Human Resource Management, usually referred to as HR, involves everything related to the employer-employee relationship and is about supporting and managing people and associated processes. It is seen as a core business function essential to the organisation's effective operation and survival. Most larger organisations have their own designated HR department, which allows for organisation-specific innovations in the way people are being managed. This is an introductory Human Resource Management course which aims to provide delegates with an overview of key themes and innovations in HR.

Silicon Valley

This short course provides an overview of the business, technical and social topics necessary for understanding Silicon Valley. It will discuss how technology, money, and culture combine to make Silicon Valley a distinctively successful place for innovation. Delegates will learn how start ups in Silicon Valley are financed and managed. Understand the unique norms and values that drive innovative startups, become familiar with new technologies, and discuss cultural and social issues in the Valley.

Business and Legal Communication

Developing confidence and skills in English is key in today's international business environment. Our intensive Business & Legal English courses have been tailored to promote fluency in the areas of communication that are particularly important in the workplace. The ability to use English confidently and clearly is a marketable skill, as it allows you to be a more effective communicator, not only on paper, but also in person, with international colleagues and clients. These courses are designed to complement all the other courses offered at CSI.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS & POLITICS

In our increasingly globalised world, the study of how nations interact is becomingly more and more popular. The following courses offer an introduction to the theoretical background of international relations and politics. Delegates will examine a range of historical topics relating to international trade, finance and politics to explore the behaviour of states and international organisations. Changes to course descriptions, topics, programme structure, and schedules may occur due to the availability of faculty members at the actual time of the programme.

International Relations & Politics – European Union as a Global Power

The decision of the Nobel Committee to award the 2012 Nobel Peace Prize to the European Union is seen by many as the best choice. Nevertheless, the decision poses delegates with a series of questions: Is the European Union actually greater than the sum of its parts? Have the achievements helped to turn the European Union into a new type of global player? Can it project its power beyond the European continent? Can we consider the European Union as a global power in other areas, such as foreign affairs, diplomacy, and security?

International Relations & International Security

These courses deal with the private as well as institutional enforcement of international commercial law. Delegates will examine the judicial and arbitration structures that exist to resolve international disputes and discuss their relative advantages. Courses offered include:

World Trade Organization

The lectures on the World Trade Organization (WTO) will discuss the history, objectives and institutional aspects (trade negotiations, decision-making, and dispute settlement) of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the WTO as a whole.

International Politics – International Organisations

Today, there are more than 7,000 international organisations registered with United Nations. But what role do these international organisations play in facilitating inter-state collaboration? What types of institutions are most likely to promote productive change, and to what extent do major intergovernmental organisations fit the bill? The course will use a combination of theoretical scholarship and cutting-edge empirical research to critically examine the role of international institutions in promoting cooperation in different areas of global politics.

HISTORY

We offer delegates the opportunity to attend a number of historical survey courses focusing on various eras, as well as courses that introduce the origins of economics and modern economics today. The following courses may be subject to change depending on availability of faculty and course schedule.

The Origins of the Industrial Revolution

This course will look at the history of economics from the Renaissance period including Machiavelli up until Industrialisation. Delegates will learn about the foundations of economics from a historical context and how these original theories were applied. In addition, the evolution of economics over these centuries will be studied in order for delegates to understand how it has changed.

The British Industrial Revolution in Global Context

This course will analyse the development of economics from Industrialisation until post World War II and the collapse of the Soviet Union. Delegates will look at the development of the modern economic system and how it has been adopted globally as well as identifying how historical events have impacted on economics.

British History: The World of Magna Carta

The Magna Carta has been established as one of the most eminent documents throughout world history and recently celebrated its 800th anniversary. This course provides participants with essential knowledge about the issue of the grant, its implications and effect on history by looking at more modern examples of declarations and treaties such as the American Declaration of Independence.

The Birth of Modern Britain

In this course we will discover how the cultural revolution in postwar Britain was achieved. We will examine the birth of the teenager and the advent of mass marketing and culture industries, such as popular music, during the late 1950s and early 1960s. We will analyse the phenomenon of 'Beatlemania'. In other words, how four working-class lads from a Northern industrial city, Liverpool, became the most significant and creative force in the history of popular music-either at the time or since. In addition, the course will explore the influences shaping British cultural life since the Second World War: for example, the process of 'Americanisation' and what this entailed. Furthermore, the course will examine the revolution in the lives of young people brought about by the emergence of mass higher education in Britain; the increase in affluence and the greater social and occupational mobility of the era. The course will introduce students to innovative new historical work being undertaken on Postwar British Culture by historians such as Dominic Sandbrook, David Fowler, and Doug Rossinow (from the US). We will discuss the pivotal places in the cultural history of postwar Britain, such as Carnaby Street, the fashion centre and Mod capital of the 1960s; Abbey Road, where the Beatles recorded their groundbreaking albums 'Abbey Road' and 'Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band'; the London School of Economics, where the first student 'sit-ins' in Britain took place-and, the crucible of the student revolution in 1960s' Britain. The course will illuminate a period of recent British history when British culture was at the forefront of creative ideas and global influence.

Espionage and International Terrorism (c. 1900 – the Present Day)

In this course, we explore the history of espionage, primarily in Britain. We examine the role Cambridge has played both in generating code-breakers during World War II and, more notoriously, in nurturing Soviet agents. The course takes as its wider theme the history and role of intelligence gathering in the twentieth century; exploring key themes in this fascinating history including the Fenian Bombing Campaign in Late Victorian Britain; the "Red Menace" (1920s), the Cambridge Spies, British Intelligence and Fascism, Churchill and British Intelligence during the Second World War; the Cuban Missile Crisis; the CIA and Student Radicalism during the 1960s; Britain and the Irish Troubles since 1968; 9/11, Afghanistan and Iraq; and the "War on Terror".

TESTIMONIALS

YOU CAN GET A TASTE OF OUR DELEGATES' EXPERIENCE ON THE PROGRAMME FROM THE TESTIMONIALS BELOW

"The summer course held by Magdalene College and CBL International was very well done. The students could choose 4 courses from total 28 courses in four different fields including business and management, international relations and politics, history, medicine and natural science. The students enjoyed the courses which are all given by professors who are related with Cambridge University. This ensured the quality of the courses. The students studied and lived for 4 weeks at Magdalene College, just like a real Cambridge student!

They experienced the way of how Cambridge faculty teach and how to learn in a Western background. They communicate with their teachers and classmates from all over the world. After a whole month of study, they said, everything is like Harry Potter except that we did not learn any magic! The summer course may change their life direction in the future and has definitely changed their mind in a good way."

GUAN YAN (VICE SECTION CHIEF - SECTION OF FACULTY AND STUDENT EXCHANGE) NANKAI UNIVERSITY, TIANJIN (CHINA)

My students have different majors and most of them went abroad for the first time. Before our departure, they were all excited and curious about foreign culture and exotic customs. After one-month study, all my students successfully obtained graduation certificates and are satisfied with this experience. I was deeply impressed by the vigorous and interactive class atmosphere. Students were encouraged to express their thoughts and opinions, and some brilliant ideas could often be sparked during the process.

At weekends, Magdalene College and CBL International organised trips to Bath, Oxford and London and other activities, which were very interesting and educative, and closely linked to the law and economy study. I think CBL International summer session programme is a wise choice for both Chinese university students and teachers to open academic visions and experience foreign culture.

PROFESSOR HENRY HUANG (VICE DEAN OF LAW SCHOOL) BEIJING NORMAL UNIVERSITY (CHINA)

In August 2017, participants from School of Economics and Management, Tongji University attended Cambridge Summer Institute, organised by CBL International and Magdalene College Cambridge. The programme was a very well-organised workshop, focusing on international economics and management. It lasted 4 weeks, combined with several lectures delivered by Cambridge faculty and visits to Oxford and London. The lectures have been a great experience in terms of having the opportunity to learn about UK business culture and society. Cambridge University is the oldest university in the English-speaking world. It is also regarded as one of the world's leading academic institutions. It was a great experience for us to live, study and have meals at Magdalene College Cambridge. We can trace the university's roots back to the end of the 12th century from its lordly architecture. The facility in dormitory, lecture venues and dinner room was excellent. Our hosts at Magdalene College Cambridge and CBL International team have been fantastic, and have really helped to make the visit enjoyable and interesting.
